

Life Turns

In 2012, in New York, there was a girl named Katy, known for her passion for surfing, as well as being adventurous, free and a fun girl. Katy loved spending her afternoons swinging, waiting for the night to see the stars.

Just one day she went on a vacation from the Wingston High School and Katy was very excited because she could go to the beach and spend time with her friends.

Vacation days were ending and Wingston High School guys were planning a party. Katy offered to make the preparations just like other guys...

One of them was called Mark. One night Katy and Mark were finishing the last details of the party and by accident Mark stumbled and tangled with the lights, Katy tried to help but the laughter of the two of them would not let her do it, minutes after Mark unraveled of the lights, they started talking about their lives and Mark told Katy that he knew how to play the guitar, so, Katy proposed that together they could sing a song at the party, because she liked to play the guitar too, so he accepted.

After several days rehearsing the song and making the last details for the party, Mark and Katy became friends, and one night Mark accompanied Katy to his house. When they were on the way it started to rain and Mark tried to run under a roof to not to get wet but then Katy pulled him into the water and started dancing. Soon Mark approached Katy and kissed her.

The party was the last Saturday of the summer, at 7 pm. Everyone gathered in a cabin near the lake where they ate, danced, talked and sang around a campfire to say goodbye to the vacations and begin their final year of classes.

On the first week it was normal for the students to go to see what their classes were, what teacher they had been assigned and to know what their schedule was.

At lunchtime the students would gather to eat in the courtyard, where they formed the different groups of friends who shared food and talked about their days. When Mark passed the yard he saw her, there was Katy, with her group of friends lying in the sun. Mark thought he was curious because before the summer he had never spoken to Katy and now all he could think about was talking to her, so with a steady pace Mark approached the small group of girls and said:

- Hello girls! How are you? - asked Mark-

Katy's friends smiled to see that a handsome, popular boy like Mark came over to talk to them, but then they realized that the person he really wanted to talk to was Katy.

- Hello! - Said Katy-

- What are you going to do today? (Mark)

- Why do you ask? (Katy)

- Would you like to go for a walk after school? (Mark)

- Actually I have something planned with the girls. (Katy)

- Come on, I'm sure they would not mind you going out with me, right girls? (Mark)

The girls nodded rather shyly.

Mark without waiting for a response from Katy said:

- See you later.

After school, they went out together to walk.

After several days they continued dating until they became a couple.

For Katy's birthday, Mark gave her a kitten as a gift, to keep her company and take care of her. The kitten was named Bruce and became a great support for Katy, since over time Katy was kept away from her friends and the things she liked because Mark was very jealous and disliked that she spent more time doing other things that did not involve him.

Mark and Katy started to fight a lot.

Mark was increasingly denying her more things with the fear that she would find more things to distract her from him. Mark also said that "if Katy loves me, she will do whatever I tell her." But Katy thought differently, she said that "if he really loves me he should support me" and these problems led Katy to make the decision to leave him and follow her dreams in California, where she was going to study and also to surf, so demonstrate a little love for herself.

Katy came to a new city, where she met new people and started a new life, everything was fine except when it rained because the rain reminded Katy of her first kiss with Mark.

Her parents agreed about Katy's decision, because they thought Mark was bad with her.

As for Mark, he followed the path of music, because the music reminded him of the song he had written in the summer with Katy.

One day in New York the road to Mark and Katy crossed again, while they were walking the subway in 2015. They both decided to spend the afternoon together and talk about how they had changed their lives. Mark told Katy how much he had regretted treating her badly and that he wanted another chance to make things better.

The couple reconciled again, married and had several children. In their relationship they continued having many problems, but together they would solve them.
